Mary Norman joins Visiting Nurse Health System as Vice President of Advancement
Responsible for fundraising and communications

Atlanta, March 4, 2014 – Visiting Nurse Health System announced the recent addition of Mary Norman as the organization's new vice president of advancement. In this role, Mary will be charged with leading the development and implementation of all fundraising and communication strategies for Visiting Nurse. Mary brings more than 25 years of experience in non-profit management, strategic partnership development and broadcast media to Visiting Nurse. Formerly, she served in non-profit management roles with the Arthritis Foundation's national office as group vice president of strategic marketing alliances, and as the senior vice president of development and communications with the Jane Goodall Institute in Arlington, VA. Most recently, Mary launched the development efforts in Georgia for Youth Villages, serving as the director of development for the state. Mary holds a Bachelor of Science degree in Mass Communications from Miami University in Oxford, Ohio.

Mark Oshnock, CEO of Visiting Nurse Health System, noted, "At this critical time in healthcare, Mary brings the entrepreneurial skill set and innovative approaches needed to grow awareness and support of our mission, which will help us serve more patients in-home and at the Hospice Atlanta Center."
